

THE ISSUE THAT WILL WIN

From New York and New Jersey Come Reports Encouraging to Republicans.

Workingmen Denounce Gruelle and Gould for Trying to Control Them in Democratic Interests—An Assembly Disregards Them.

Hon. W. D. Owen, Congressman from the South Indiana district, is in the city on his way to Rochester, where his congressional campaign will be held to-morrow. He will have no opposition for renomination. His services in the House have been of a high order, and his constituents will not care to make any change.

Speaking of national politics, Mr. Owen said: "I feel very confident of Republican success this fall. There is no question but the drift is all our way. I think this is especially true in the East. General Harrison has proved himself a splendid candidate."

"What is the situation in New York and New Jersey, so far as you can hear?" was asked him by a Journal reporter.

"Republican Congressmen say that our chances in those States are excellent. They are frequently at home, and are mixing with their people continually. They are quite different from Western Congressmen, who do not get home very often, and, therefore, they have a good opportunity to know the feeling. All of them are confident of success. They say to me: 'Why, the attitude taken by the Democratic party is the very one we have wanted them to take for ten years. We have always felt that on the question of free trade versus tariff the American people would sustain the Republican party, the advocate and champion of protection. We welcome the contest.' That's the way they talk to me. They report the changes that are going on as nearly all one way. The Republican newspaper accounts on this point are all accurate. I look forward to a good increase in the Republican majority in the State of New York, and believe that in the city itself we are going to hold the large Irish vote that went for Mr. Blaine in 1884. That is the report we get from the State at present. In New Jersey we have also great encouragement. A great many of the industries of that State are seriously affected by the tariff, and this fact is being made known by the State in the House. Mr. Buchanan of that State used to get up and offer an amendment every time an article came along that struck at New Jersey industries. Of course, he was voted down by the Democrats every time, not, however, before he could get in a telling short speech calling the attention of the voters of his State to the determined attitude of the Democracy in regard to their industries. These speeches of Mr. Buchanan are all now being printed, together with the votes on the points he raised, in detail. They of themselves will do a good deal toward setting the real issue squarely before the people. The same defection in the Democratic ranks that exists in New York exists also in New Jersey. The Republicans are steady, and although we haven't carried that State for a long time, I think our chances do so are good this year."

"The Republicans intend to fight the battle fairly and squarely on the tariff issue, do they not?"

"Yes, that is the line of battle. The Democrats are already trying to hedge on the matter. They are now, in judgment, trying to make a change of front on the issue. Such a course as they have pursued thus far in the campaign will not lead the Republican party to the victory. The Democrats have the gall to say that in my district I propose to make the fight a square one between a party that insists that the government must have a constitutional right to levy taxes on imports for the protection of the home manufacturer, but that in addition to that, it is good policy to do so. The Democrats must and will be held to their first position on this great question, for, as every one knows, that is their real sentiment. The majority of the men who passed the Mills bill are free-traders at heart if they had the courage to say so. The battle is one distinctively between free trade and protection, and that great fact ought not to be lost sight of in the campaign. I will deliver an address to my district convention to-morrow, outlining the position on which the battle will be fought so far as I am concerned."

"What do you think of the Republican candidate for Governor?"

"General Hovey will make a strong race, I would for Governor. He is a man of high caliber, and I think the selection of General Hovey a good one. He stands for one great idea, and that is that nothing is too good for the Union soldier. He will make a splendid campaign among the veterans. His record compared with that of his opponent, Mr. Gruelle, is a matter of fact. When it is shown up in the campaign, as it will be, the reason why the soldier's friend, how he was challenged by the Republicans to call on the arena, and when he had a chance and refused to do so, how, when they were waiting for him, he left for home this morning, and will return to Washington as soon as his district convention is over."

"They will not follow Gruelle."

The workingmen in this city are becoming thoroughly disgusted at the sell-out of Tom Gruelle and Ed Gould, who aspire to be their leaders in politics. "The fact is," said one who was formerly a Knight of Labor, but withdrew simply because he thought politicians were attempting to run the organization and subvert the principles upon which it was founded, "Gruelle has never been anything else but a Democrat. He has always been with them, and has tried to work the laboring organizations for that party. Just such men as he are the ones who do the cause of labor more harm than they do it good—men who are professional in looking after the interests of labor, but take care never to do any work themselves. There is one thing, however, Mr. Gruelle will find that he can't run intelligent working men. He will do well to control his own race. His paper has not a circulation above five hundred. Workingmen don't care to read anything from a man who is nothing but a hired political beater. They can see through his little game."

"What about the withdrawal of the carpenters' union from the Central Labor Union?" he was asked.

"Well, the carpenters saw that Democratic paid agents were trying to work the organization, and they held a meeting and unanimously decided to withdraw. The German carpenters did the same thing, and other organizations will do so. A great many of these men are Republicans and have the interests of labor at heart, and they don't propose to be run by such fellows as Gould and Gruelle. A meeting will be held next Friday night of all the building trades to form a league to be non-partisan, as all labor organizations ought to be, and will be composed of men who refuse to be led into the Democratic camp by schemers who have been purchased for that purpose, and such others as have the true interest of labor uppermost in their mind. These same men, Gruelle and Gould, were up at the meeting of District Assembly No. 10, I think it was last week, trying to work through resolutions denouncing General Harrison. Several members got up and left them. They saw that the whole thing was a sham, and that was the hand of the Democratic committee trying to manipulate the organization. Then every attempt is being made by these same fellows to turn Labor Union into a Democratic affair. They have succeeded in getting Byrum on as a speaker, and are trying in other ways to make a little political capital out of it."

"That their action is doing the Republican cause good. The members of the labor organizations, who are in them for the good there is in them, are coming to see that they will not be used by men of the caliber of Gruelle and Gould. It is high time that they should learn that nothing does the cause of wage-workers so much harm as a few designing politicians who get in the order for the purpose of selling it out."

The Union Veterans.

Among the very enthusiastic and active Republicans in Indianapolis are the old soldiers who compose the Union Veterans' association, which includes the First Regiment of the Harrison and Morton Guards. There are over 1,700 men enrolled, and new recruits are being received every day. At their regular meeting last night Phyllis Hall was completely filled and many were unable to gain admittance. There was no special business to come before the association, but a very interesting and enthusiastic time was had. Preliminary steps toward the organization of a second regiment were taken, and the work will likely be completed at the next meeting. The recruiting officer feels confident they can have two full regiments before election day. Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

It was the night the First Regiment was to have called upon General Harrison, but the election day, Hon. John Y. Rogers, of Danville, candidate for circuit judge, was present at the meeting and was introduced to the veterans as an old soldier. He was given a very hearty welcome, and in response made a few remarks. He said it was gratifying to see the old veterans so active in the interests of the Republican party, and that it was not strange that veterans should stand by it. Albert G. Thayer, once a Democrat, and now ardently engaged in working for the Republican cause, also spoke, his remarks being greeted with much applause.

MINOR CITY MATTERS.

To-Day's Doings.

WOMAN'S STATE FAIR ASSOCIATION—2 P. M.

Agribusiness Lecture—"Poor People's Trouble"—Fourth Christian Church, evening.

LEAGUE BASE-BALL—Indianapolis and Detroit, Athletic Park, 4 P. M.

PARK THEATRE—"Two Johns Comedy Company."

BATTLE OF ATLANTA CYCLOPAMA—Market street, between Illinois and Tennessee streets, day and evening.

Local News Notes.

A new Grand Army post will be organized Thursday evening at the hall of the George H. Thomas Post.

About 10 o'clock last night officers Temple and Hurt arrested Al. Luther, who is charged with drinking liquor at a West-side saloon.

Marriage licenses were issued yesterday to James Henry Overton and Mattie Jones, Henry Dunn and Emma F. Fay, John W. Thornburn and Laura Thornburn, Theodore R. Mitchell and Mary E. Mitchell.

The remains of Dr. A. K. Fischer were taken to Cheboygan, Mich., last night for burial. The German Veterans escorted the body to the depot, and quite a number of friends of the deceased were present.

Between 10 and 11 o'clock last night thieves entered Sloan's drug store, on Washington street, and secured considerable merchandise. They effected an entrance through a rear window, and evaded the eyes of the clerk in the front part of the store.

Yesterday morning Mrs. M. E. Cunningham's dog office, near the Massachusetts avenue depot, was entered by thieves, who took a small amount of money. Later in the day some boys went into the grocery of Mr. Watkins, corner of St. Clair and Pine streets, and robbed the till of $3.

Miss Maggie Morrison is visiting friends in the city.

Will Hord has returned from his trip to New Orleans.

Mr. and Mrs. Lew Nicolai have returned from their trip to the lakes.

George L. A. Thomson, of Louisville, Ky., spent Sunday with friends in the city.

Miss George Shindle will leave to-morrow on a visit to friends in the northern part of the State.

Judge Woods, of the federal court, leaves to-day for the Middle West, to be absent two weeks.

Mrs. D. E. Snyder and Miss Annie Snyder leave to-day for the East to be gone about two months.

Mrs. Fannie W. Morrison has returned from Columbus, where she was the guest of Colonel Bailey and family.

Mr. J. D. Roscoe, of Louisville, Ky., formerly of the Louisville Herald, was in the city yesterday on a visit to friends in the northern part of the State.

Mr. and Mrs. Sewall, Miss Sewall, Miss Lulu Wilson, Doctor Anderson and Mr. Barnes composed a party which went away last Saturday for a stay of a fortnight.

Prof. Gay Waters, author of "Witches," will lecture to-night at the Fourth Christian Church, North West street, between Pratt and St. Louis streets, at 8 o'clock.

Mayor DeJoy will go to Port Huron, Mich., again to-morrow, and will be absent a week or ten days. Recently he has been unable to stand a strain of the official work imposed on him, and yesterday morning he had to leave the bench on account of sickness. Squire Smock will be acting Mayor during his absence.

James R. Carnahan was awarded a warm reception on the occasion of his recent visit to Portland, Ore. He was met at the train by a company of Knights of Pythias, and escorted to their hall, where a large public meeting was held. Mr. Carnahan responded at some length. He dwelt upon the growth and benefits of the United Franchise Club, of which he is president, and upon the importance of the State Franchise Encampment in California.

END OF A WELL-SPENT LIFE.

Death of James C. Yohn, One of the Wealthy and Representative Men of the City.

James C. Yohn, one of Indianapolis' oldest citizens, died yesterday morning, at 5:30 o'clock, at his home on the corner of Delaware and Vermont streets. The sickness leading to his death had covered a period of eleven days, but very few knew that his condition was critical, and the announcement of his death caused surprise as well as profound sorrow. A week ago last Thursday he was attacked by a bilious disorder, attended with very acute pains. For a few days his condition was precarious, but he improved until his family felt quite hopeful of his recovery. Sunday evening he appeared so well that those about him were cheerful, but toward midnight alarming symptoms manifested themselves. He sank rapidly from that hour, and slowly his family began to realize that the last moment was drawing near. He retained full possession of his faculties until the last.

Mr. Yohn was born in Redbank, Baltimore county, Maryland, May 1818. His youth was spent on a farm, he early became acquainted with the traffic of a large city by his regular visits to the city, from which he received but a few miles distant in 1834, he came to Indiana, accompanied by his mother, two sisters and an uncle. One of the sisters became the wife of United States Senator William H. Harrison, and Mr. Yohn lived in this city, but afterward settled down in the city, being employed first as store-boy and then as clerk in the office of the late Governor. He was a partner in business. When he began business on his own account, success, as it had done before, attended his efforts, and for a long time his large, dry goods store, on the corner of Delaware and Vermont streets, was one of the most successful in the city. He retired from active business at this time, having made a fortune. During the war he was appointed a paymaster in the United States army, and was afterward a major, but the position was not congenial, and he resigned.

Mr. Yohn has always been highly esteemed, and has exerted a wide influence in social, religious and political circles. He was active in public enterprises, and his interest in education and church work was one of his chief characteristics. When a young man he belonged to the Methodist church, and was the only member of that denomination who had retired from active business at this time, having made a fortune. During the war he was appointed a paymaster in the United States army, and was afterward a major, but the position was not congenial, and he resigned.

Mr. Yohn has always been highly esteemed, and has exerted a wide influence in social, religious and political circles. He was active in public enterprises, and his interest in education and church work was one of his chief characteristics. When a young man he belonged to the Methodist church, and was the only member of that denomination who had retired from active business at this time, having made a fortune. During the war he was appointed a paymaster in the United States army, and was afterward a major, but the position was not congenial, and he resigned.

Mr. Yohn has always been highly esteemed, and has exerted a wide influence in social, religious and political circles. He was active in public enterprises, and his interest in education and church work was one of his chief characteristics. When a young man he belonged to the Methodist church, and was the only member of that denomination who had retired from active business at this time, having made a fortune. During the war he was appointed a paymaster in the United States army, and was afterward a major, but the position was not congenial, and he resigned.

Mr. Yohn has always been highly esteemed, and has exerted a wide influence in social, religious and political circles. He was active in public enterprises, and his interest in education and church work was one of his chief characteristics. When a young man he belonged to the Methodist church, and was the only member of that denomination who had retired from active business at this time, having made a fortune. During the war he was appointed a paymaster in the United States army, and was afterward a major, but the position was not congenial, and he resigned.

Mr. Yohn has always been highly esteemed, and has exerted a wide influence in social, religious and political circles. He was active in public enterprises, and his interest in education and church work was one of his chief characteristics. When a young man he belonged to the Methodist church, and was the only member of that denomination who had retired from active business at this time, having made a fortune. During the war he was appointed a paymaster in the United States army, and was afterward a major, but the position was not congenial, and he resigned.

Mr. Yohn has always been highly esteemed, and has exerted a wide influence in social, religious and political circles. He was active in public enterprises, and his interest in education and church work was one of his chief characteristics. When a young man he belonged to the Methodist church, and was the only member of that denomination who had retired from active business at this time, having made a fortune. During the war he was appointed a paymaster in the United States army, and was afterward a major, but the position was not congenial, and he resigned.

Mr. Yohn has always been highly esteemed, and has exerted a wide influence in social, religious and political circles. He was active in public enterprises, and his interest in education and church work was one of his chief characteristics. When a young man he belonged to the Methodist church, and was the only member of that denomination who had retired from active business at this time, having made a fortune. During the war he was appointed a paymaster in the United States army, and was afterward a major, but the position was not congenial, and he resigned.

Mr. Yohn has always been highly esteemed, and has exerted a wide influence in social, religious and political circles. He was active in public enterprises, and his interest in education and church work was one of his chief characteristics. When a young man he belonged to the Methodist church, and was the only member of that denomination who had retired from active business at this time, having made a fortune. During the war he was appointed a paymaster in the United States army, and was afterward a major, but the position was not congenial, and he resigned.

a great party. Neither blatant nor given to display of impetuosity, not ambitious for victory by means which consist with honor, he has won the confidence of the sensible people of the United States. A quiet feeling that a man can be trusted—better as a presage of victory than tumultuous enthusiasm, which often becomes flat and empty—is evidenced by the respect with which the name of Benjamin Harrison is everywhere greeted.

THE STATE TICKET AND CANVASS.

Hearty Indorsement of the Work of the State Convention by the County Press.

General Hovey was one of the three men who voted for Thoburn in the Thoburn-Carlisle contested election case before the State Supreme Court. Hovey stood up against all odds for the workman, because he believed he was being deprived of his rights.—Vernon Banner.

If there was any doubt, however, as to the State going a Republican majority this fall, the nomination of General Hovey removes that doubt. He is one of those Generals who are not afraid of a contest, and this will not be an exception.—Francisco Chronicle.

The unequivocal stand taken by the Republicans of Indiana in favor of the elimination of the saloon as a factor in politics, and the adoption of a temperance platform, has been a marked effect on the prohibition movement. Any true friend of sobriety and temperance will not be led away by the lying cry of "free white men."

The people of Indiana will rebuke the steal of the Lieutenant-governor's office, the legislative gerrymander, the tally-sheet forgeries, the prostitution of the State's benevolent institutions to political ends, and several such matters, by the election of Hovey and Cramer in November. They will also do their share toward suppressing free trade. Fire the rascals